Hot sale circuit breaker in substation exporter

Efficient
Higher Revenue

- Max. Efficiency 97.5%
- Max. PV Input Voltage 600V
- 150% Peak Output Power
- 2 MPP Trackers, 150% DC Input Oversizing
- Max. PV Input Current 16A, Compatible with High Power Modules

Intelligent
Simple O&M

- IP66 Protection Degree: support outdoor installation
- Smart I-V Curve Diagnosis Function: locate PV string faults accurately and automatically detect faults
- DC & AC Type II SPD: prevent lightning damage
- Battery Reverse Connection Protection

Flexible Abundant Configuration

- Plug & Play, EPS Switching Under 10ms
- Compatible with Lead-acid and Lithium Batteries
- Max. 6 units Inverters Parallel
- AFCI Function (Optional): when an arc-fault is detected the inverter immediately stops operation

Overview

What does a circuit breaker do in a substation?

Circuit breakers perform two fundamental roles in substations: (1) interrupt high fault currents safely to protect equipment and limit system disturbance, and (2) provide a means of making and routing power during normal operation (switching, sectionalizing).

Why are arrester placement & TRV synchronized in HV substations?

Restrike / Reignition: if the dielectric recovery after current zero is insufficient for the TRV applied, the arc can re-ignite, giving multiple arc events and large transient currents—this is a key reason why arrester placement and TRV capability are tightly coordinated in HV substations.

What is SF₆ circuit breaker?

SF₆ circuit-breakers SF₆ is a high-dielectric, electronegative gas that both cools and chemically suppresses the arc by electron attachment; it allows compact interrupting chambers and high dielectric recovery after current zero. Modern SF₆ breakers use puffer or self-blast techniques to increase the gas flow through the arc.

What happens when a circuit breaker opens under load?

AC circuit breaker. Image used courtesy of ENTSO-E. When a breaker opens under load or fault, the following sequence occurs (useful for modeling and protection design): Contact separation and arc initiation. As the contacts separate, a plasma arc forms between them; this arc initially conducts the current while the contacts move.
